Just bottled one month ago after eight years in wood (Botti Grandi) so despite the age its just a baby. The wood is still quite up front. Here the most floral though the palate is thick and compressed, spice of course, as in all the wines but somehow there is evidence of what you have come to expect, despite the youth. The confusion and the conundrum align to cause your brain to say "too young to really know anything." This is the beauty of complexity in Alessandro Castellani's Amarone, specifically from the clay-limestone hill that is Ravazzòl. Drink 2020-2030. Tasted September 2016.
