Generally speaking the Ravazzòl blend is 70 per cent corvina, (20) corvinone and (10) rondinella plus molinara. The clay-limestone soil is unequivocally the thing that changes the wine and with time the emerge is all about more mineral and spice. Much older vines (minimum 50 years old) bring about an increased richness but also a more lifted brightness. "This is my idea of Amarone, traditional but unusual," tells Alessandro Castellani. "We've invented nothing." Sapidity, acidity, supple peppery schisty-like, syrah-esque spice. Again a bite but no scathe. "It's difficult to make an Amarone that is powerful with drinkability. You need a good terroir." Drink 2019-2029. Tasted September 2016.
